DETAILED ACTION

Priority

1. Receipt is acknowledged of papers submitted under 35 U.S.C. 119(a)-(d), which papers have been placed of record in the file.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

3. Claims 1 and 3-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Miller et al. (US 6,079,662).

Miller et al. teach an airshaft for holding a roll of web material, comprising: an elongate shaft body 212 having a shaft axis and an outer cylindrical shaft surface formed with at least three longitudinally extending bladder retaining grooves 214, each of the bladder retaining grooves 214 being generally inverted T-shaped and having a narrower access opening formed in the shaft surface and a wider retaining section disposed between the access opening and the shaft axis; a set of elongate inflatable bladder members 216, each of which is received in the retaining section of a respective one of the retaining grooves 214; and a plurality of roll contact pieces 220, each of which has a biased side 230 disposed in the retaining section of one of the retaining grooves 214 and in contact with the inflatable bladder member 216 in one of the retaining grooves 214, and a roll contacting side (see close to lead line 220) extending out of one of the retaining grooves 214 through the access opening of one of retaining grooves 214, the roll contacting side having a distal contact face; wherein the roll contact pieces 220 include a set of first roll contact pieces 222 and a set of second roll contact pieces 220, the distal contact face of the roll contacting side of each of the first roll contact pieces 222 forming a first height with the inflatable bladder member 216 in one of said retaining grooves 214, the distal contact face of the roll contacting side of each of the second roll contact pieces 220 forming a second height with the inflatable bladder member 216 in one of the retaining grooves 214, the second height being shorter than said first height (see figure 9); whereby, when the roll of web material is sleeved on the shaft body 212, and when the inflatable bladder members 216 are inflated, the distal contact faces of the roll contacting sides of the first roll contact pieces 222 contact the roll of web material for holding the roll of web material on the shaft body 212, and the distal contact faces of the roll contacting sides of the second roll contact pieces 220 contact the roll of web material for positioning stably the roll of web material on the shaft body 212.

Regarding claim 3, the bladder retaining grooves 214 extends parallel to the shaft axis.

Regarding claim 4, as shown in figure 13, the bladder could extend along a twisted line with respect to the shaft axis.

Regarding claim 5, it is inherent that there is an air pump unit connected to the inflatable bladder members 216 in order to expand the bladder members.

Regarding claim 6, as shown in figure 9, the contact pieces 220,222 are disposed side-by-side on the inflatable bladder member 216 in one of the retaining grooves 214.

Allowable Subject Matter

4. Claim 2 is objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
